HENRY JARVIS, SR., DEAD.

An Odd Citizen Passes Away.

Henry Jarvis, Sr., one of the oldest and most respected citizens of the District of Columbia died Oct. 31, '12, at 8 o'clock a. m. He was an employee of the State Department from Oct. 1866 to Oct. 31, 1902, a period of 36 years which position he held with much credit. He was also deacon of the 19th st. Baptist Church for over 40 years. None knew him but to love him and none spoke of him but in praise. At the general request of many friends his body lay in state in the 19th st. Baptist Church from 1 until 2:30 o'clock on Sunday Nov. 2. The funeral exercises were conducted by the Rev. Walter Brooks, assisted by Revs. Howard, Shepard, Burke and several others. Very appropriate resolutions were read by Mrs. Julia Layton, J. H. R. Brown, Rev. Pinn and Miss Williams. The interment was at Harmony Cemetery.

Mr. Jarvis leaves three sons, Charles, Edward and Henry Jr. Excellent young men. Charles and Edward have lived out of the city for a number of years.

Speaking of several of the prominent delegates who attended the B. M. C. of the Grand United Order of Odd-Fellows, recently held at New Haven, Conn., the Odd Fellows' Journal has this to say of past Grand Master W. C. Martin:—

"Martin of the District of Columbia seemed to be in complete harmony with the Grand Master, notwithstanding that little unpleasantness about the District Grand Mastership of the District of Columbia. He made a dignified chairman of his delegation."

Mr. Martin is an able, courteous and well known member of the District bar, and has the full confidence and respect of the judges of the various courts and the members of the bar. As an Odd-fellow he is the peer of any member of the order in America, and had the members of the order of the District of Columbia adopted his plans to pay for their fall, submitted to them. Those Odd-fellows who said that Martin would not be seated in the B. M. C. that Grand master Morris would not recognize him as chairman of the Washington delegation, that by reason of his being chairman the District would not get a representation and who to do a hundred and one other yarns for the purpose of defeating him, should now close their mouths and go way back and sit down.

Marlin

.32 Cal. High-Pressure Smokeless
IN MODEL 1893

WE are prepared to furnish our full line of Model '93 rifles, solid and take down, for the new .32 Caliber HIGH PRESSURE SMOKELESS cartridge. This size uses a 165-grain bullet and has a velocity of over 2,000 feet per second, making it the most powerful cartridge made for an American arm, with the exception of the .30-40 U. S. Army. It is sufficiently deadly for any game known in North America. Another great advantage is that the barrel is bored and rifled, but not chambered exactly the same as the regular .32-40 Marlin, one turn in 16 inches. This makes the use of black powder and lead bullets as satisfactory and convenient as in a regular black powder rifle. This size is the first high-pressure arm developed in this country for a caliber larger than .30, and the first to use a slow enough twist to give best results with black powder ammunition. Prices same as .30-40 MARLIN. 120-page cat. log of rifles, guns, ammunition, etc., cover in 9 colors, mailed for three stamps.

OHIO MAN'S FUNNEL.

He Uses It Constantly to Obtain Meat and Drink.

His Appearance in a New Orleans Saloon Almost Paralyzed the Barkeeper—Sensation in Police Station.

There are men who eat with their fingers in the rude way of the forefathers, and men who shovel in pie with their knives, and also another class which uses the fork with the right hand, but, says the Picayune, a genius who uses neither of these ways of conveying his bread to his bread basket, nor his liquor to the place provided for such things, showed up in New Orleans some time ago.

There was nothing peculiar in the man's dress or in the way he walked up to the bar and called for a drink. The white-aproned genius behind the counter set out the poison just as he did for everybody else. At this the man produced a small tin funnel from his coat pocket and unwrapped a yard or two of rubber tube from around his neck and asked the barkeeper to kindly pour the whisky into the funnel. At first the mixologist believed somebody was handing him a practical joke, but the customer insisted and the whisky was poured in. The man waited a moment and then smacked his lips, remarking that the liquor was the genuine article and then walked out.

It was some time before the bartender could recover his breath, and in the meantime the man was out of range. But the man came around again the next day and had several drinks. The curiosity of the barman had reached the point where he could no longer control it, and he asked the strange customer what it was all about, and how it was he did not take his swig like the rest of mankind.

The man then said he had been a wanderer over the face of the earth for years, had originally come from Ohio, and because of disappointment in business and the breaking up of his home had gulped down a big dose of carbolic acid one day in the hope of reaching the other side in a hurry. He said he took enough to kill two or three people, but before the poison completed the job of delivering his soul to its last keeper, the unfeeling doctor had come along and brought back the fading life. But the operation cost him his swallowing apparatus, and he had been compelled to go through life eating his meals through a tube inserted in his throat. The man was a veritable show around the bar-room for some days, and also at a neighboring restaurant, where he used to get his meals. He usually ate a couple of soft-boiled eggs for breakfast. He also drank quantities of coffee, and all went through the funnel.

The people at the Central police station had a funny experience with the man. He got too much liquor one night, and was arrested and locked up. The only articles on his person were a funnel and a few dimes. The man had not been in the cell many minutes before he shouted for some one to bring him a drink of water. The jailer thought this was the usual request from the overheated patient, and told him there was a bucket of water in the cell and he could drink to his heart's content. But the man declared he could not drink without assistance, and finally the jailer went to him. The man then produced the funnel and requested that the water be poured in. The jailer nearly dropped dead, but he thought he would be obliging, and he complied. In the morning when the man repeated the operation at breakfast they began to realize that here was a freak proper.

So far as all the attributes of the throat and mouth are concerned the man has perfect control. He articulates as well as anybody, breathes as well as anybody, and there is not the slightest outward appearance of irregularity till eating and drinking time comes around, and then he had to show his hand, or his neck.

Diving Makes Men Cross.

A professional diver says that one of the strange effects of diving is the invariable bad temper felt while working at the bottom of the sea. As this usually passes away as soon as the surface is reached, it is probably due to the pressure of the air affecting the lungs, and through them the brain. The exhilaration and good temper of the mountain climber is a contrary feeling, from an opposite cause.

Some University Statistics.

Germans seem to be more eager for collegiate education than the people of other countries. In Germany one man in 213 goes to a university; in Scotland, one in 520; in the United States, one in 2,000, and in England, one in 5,000.
